Mildred McCarty.

Edmund Kieras.

A graduate of St. Mary's academy and the University of Notre Dame, she has attended Aquinas since 1940, when she was appointed head of the women's dormitory. She did bring a wide assortment of friends with her, but she had no doubt attract many students. There will be no excuse when the new dormitory is built, and the Student Guide Association will, of course, be better off. A more extensive version of the Student Guide, larger and more extensive, will be on sale.

The student loan fund which was last year, was now a $1,400 endowment fund which will make it possible for the students to regularize their lives, and more especially, to help them to achieve their dream. The fund is established by the Student Loan Committee, and the student loan committee is an absolute necessity. Mildred McCarty.

It is unfair that many who really want to attend Catholic College are deprived of this chance because of inadequate facilities. In order to further Catholic ideals youth must imitate Catholic principles, not only in grades school, but especially during adolescence. A new Catholic College school is an absolute necessity.

Cooperative Ventures Offer Money Saving Possibilities

If you could save money by cooperating with other students, would you hesitate? Cooperative ventures prove successful in colleges proving successful means to financial saving, and comfort.

The idea behind consumer cooperatives is that a group of people get together and form an organization where the group of people can purchase goods at a lower cost than what would be paid by the same purchase separately. This idea can be applied to any area of college life, making the group of students the most popular cooperatives are book-cooperative and meal-plan.

The most desirable form of cooperative for Aquinas is probably a student cafeteria service which can be set up. It would give great social asset as well as a convenience to the college. Students could probably buy meals at a lower cost than serving the food and washing dishes. If food were to be purchased in quantities, the venture would have a fair chance of success.

There are, of course, many difficulties that would have to be overcome. Money to start up the cooperative would have to be found. On the other hand, "unbewildered"-That's What the Girl Says

The history and aspirations of the Negro are expressed in literature and poetry by Charles Laskimip, composer, pianist, and lecturer, at a general assembly, October 31, the Knights of Columbus council chamber. The lecture-recital, sponsored by the Banque of the Congo, oved its especially warm appeal as much to the dignified openness of Mr. Laskimip's personality as to the skill and feeling with which he performed.

"I Am a Negro," a poem by Langston Hughes, made an effective begining, and "I, Too, Sing America," the same author, put the right finishing touch to the program. Both were recited with deep but restrained passion. Commenting on the latter poem, the performer said, "First we are American; then we are Negroes." He gave his original musical background to these pieces and to his delightful interpretation of "Cre- tion," a reverent yet earthy poem by James Weldon Johnson. Mr. Laskimip's rendition of "The Congo" by Vachel Lindsay was inspired and notable for the ex-
