Gala Week-end To Include
Dance, Carnival, Dinner

Atmosphere! Attraction! Dinner is now being served.
Visit the Old Heidelberg, home of famous Germans, and dance your cares away.
Pitch a penny. Double! Triple!

These are just a few of the calls which will echo throughout the halls of Aquinas College at the Gala Week-end.

Preceding the actual carnival will be the Seniors' Inaugural Ball, an informal dance in the Black and Silver Room of the Civic auditorium on Friday, Nov. 6. Dancing will be from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. to the music of the Ambassadors. Tickets for the dance are $2.50. General chairman for the event are Mary Ellen Sloan and James Pelon. They are assisted by Roxanna Coae, decorations; Judith Margrave, tickets; Norman Farhat, king and queen elections.

William Edelheit, chairmen, Mary Pfeffer, dance; Kathleen Cashen, publicity; and Amy Kallweiss, decorations; compile their information for releases to the local newspapers.

Dear Mrs. Wilma Nelson.

The services provided by the student health center of the College are excluded from the plan. It protects the student on and off the campus. It includes vacation periods within the semester.

The College carries at its own expense general liability insurance which covers accidents or injuries occurring on the campus for which it is liable.

The College offers an Insurance Plan

The administration of the College is offering to the students a voluntary health insurance plan to go into effect the second semester. Most students are not covered by Blue Cross or other hospitalization plans and should be interested in a low-cost coverage for illness and accident.

A national company will make contracts with individual students and the premiums will be charged against the student's accounts at registration time. The plan will cost about $72 per semester.

The record "We Want a Touchdown" spins on a needleless phonograph at Aquinas.

While thousands flock to the college stadiums to watch the long passes and thrilling runs, colorful halftime ceremonies and accompaniment cheerleaders, the only Saturday afternoon around the Aquinas campus is the rustle of the leaves in the breeze.

The Aquinas students' only touch with the third of football may be hearing its resounding on the campus gymnasiums in radio and TV or a long trip to the big game.

Why doesn't Aquinas have a football team? It's a question that has visited many a bell-session in the campus corners.

The biggest reason is that the school doesn't have $25,000 to field a football team. In fact, it has enough trouble supporting a baseball team. A quick look at the primes quotas any remarks to the effect that the $25,000 price tag is ridiculous. Traveling costs, medical expenses and supplies, field rental, opponents' guarantees, officials, publicity, printing of tickets and programs, and the largest expense of all, the salaries of the coaching staff add up to a tidy sum.

Three Bolster Cheering Squad

We're from Aquinas, couldn't be prouder was the cry of approximately 20 enthusiastic girls as they leaped high in the air, shouting with hopes of being added to the cheering nucleus.

After much ado, the judges picked three clear-voiced lasses to be added to the cheerleading nucleus.

The newcomers are Joann Gann, sophomore from G.B., Janet Van Leuven, freshman from Sparta, and Marje Kunt, freshman from Zeeland.

Veteran cheerleaders are Captain Madeline Sadowski, and Marilynn Perry, G.R., juniors, Judy Lee, Judy Spendow, and Mary Boggi-ell, Ellen Hands, and Varsity members Art Lee and John Blondin.

It would cost at least $8,500 just for equipment to field a team. Aquinas is not a state-supported school and only gifts from alumnae and friends of the college would bear the financial burden of fielding a football team.

Football is only a thing of the future at Aquinas because the athletic system must grow first. If we show good support to the basketball team, we may in the future have a football team to support.

Students and Politics
by Jack Schremes

I’ve made a mistake. About a month ago in this column I wrote about the opportunity for students in political activities of the community. I pointed out events which offered an opportunity for political education and expression. Since that time there have been a number of such activities: Young Republican and Young Democratic conventions, debates on foreign affairs, and a student political party day at a local college.

As a whole, these efforts have been rather poor if at all successful. In fact I have come to believe that I spoke too soon in urging students to participate in outside political activities. How could I expect students to be active in such events when they will not first take part in student political activities? I think it is important that we be more aware and recently we have failed in our governmental responsibility.

At this time, it is overly optimistic to think that the elections of last spring and this fall will verify the fact that the student vote is an important political factor. The elections had this spirit because it has great prestige, but it is not clear that the whole vote will be involved.

If the carnival were to do nothing but bring out a fine school spirit — a spirit of cooperation — it would be a success. Last year it did bring out this spirit. It is hoped that this year the same spirit will be carried over into both the school and the city.

The revitalized Varsity club will take over ticket selling at games. The establishment of a concession stand has been proposed, as well as provisions for making arrangements with businesses.

In addition, a publicity committee is being organized. It will send notices of the events and provide a reservoir of help for the students. For this purpose, the Student Senate has been invited to be a part of the committee.

We have been careful not to recommend any political action. We do not want to be a political club. We have been careful not to recommend any political action. We do not want to be a political club.

There are also a pair of “never-do’s” which will be useful. Never say, “I don’t care.” Don’t do anything thereby anybody briefly. Veracity is strength.

Some suggestions may launch you on a new career. Many of the techniques you will acquire through diligence and persistence. Press on.

Festival Needs Spirit, Work
by John Burns

Not too long ago a wireless Purdue football team pulled an upset and defeated Howard University, 21-7. The game that raised Purdue from the ranks of mediocrity to the ranks of the victorious is an object lesson that spirit means victory. Purdue had this spirit because it has great prestige, but it is not clear that the whole vote will be involved.

Friends Hold Tea; Election; Library Receives Donations

Friends of the Aquinas Library held their annual autumn tea and election of officers, Oct. 30. Their special project is the furnishing of the new library.
