Ecce Sacerdos Magnus

These words, “Ecce Sacerdos Magnus” (“Behold the Great Priest”), are taken from a traditional Latin hymn sung at liturgi­cal ceremonies graced by the presence of a bishop. The majesty and authority of the bishop are re­ lected in the words of this hymn.

Lenten Spiritual Fare Abounds

The Lenten season is a time of reflection and spiritual growth for many Catholics. During Lent, the faithful are encouraged to examine their lives, make amends for their sins, and prepare for the celebration of Easter. Here are some spiritual activities and resources to help you make the most of this Lenten season.

Not To Be Forgotten

Since the moment he was selected to be our first man to orbit earth, John Glenn has been minutely examined by the world as if he were bringing something new into being. But what is it that he is trying to bring into being? To answer that question, we need to listen. We need to listen to what he says and what he represents, not just to what he means to us. We need to listen to what he is trying to bring into being.

ARISE, LYSISTRATA;

Men Hunt Women, They Seek Knowledge

Among the various popular mis-conceptions floating about the campus, one is that all women are simply trying to catch themselves a man. Watch how many articles, letters, and posters pop up on campus urging the fellows to ask the girls to this or that dance. Notice the whole attitude behind the local equivalent of TWIP. If there aren't enough to give you the general impression that women are here only to catch themselves a man, then find any place in the halls, classrooms, cafeteria, or even a street where students are passing each other. If you see a pair of students meeting for the first time, chances are the first thing he'll ask her is, "Hey, let's do some pre-co-rumine comments on the weather, is she whether she is working for her M.M.S degree.

And then there was that line, "Just remember, a girl is a girl and a boy is a boy in every way," which smacked strongly of a getting-to-know-you program. In fact, aside from those formal introductions, the only other advice of the faculty, procured season tickets—are being held. It seems reasonable to us that juniors and seniors, after two years of being compelled to do what is good for them, should be allowed to begin to decide for themselves.

The Aquinas Story is Told

More and more official delegations have been going out from our college. Students and faculty will travel further from Grand Rapids to publicize Aquinas and broaden its image on the national scene. This ought to be considered a step in the right direction.

But in the last month the Aquinas Players traveled to Detroit and Chicago with this year's play. The student senate decided to undertake a delegation to the Middle East, and then to the Pacific.

There is no better publicity for us than to have good articulation. If we can convince about 300 people that Aquinas has good dramatic performance and then talk about Aquinas, people will listen.

Editor Reports On U.S.N.A.

"I am certain that young people all over the world will find your work and activity a confident assurance that America needs heroes. And John Glenn was here when we needed one.

To Go Or Not To Go

We can remember that the Herald has, from time to time, attempted to explain to the students why the administration makes the rules that it does. And why, we feel, the editorial board has tried to explain just why the student body becomes upset over these rules.

Whenever a situation arises in which there is some conflict over a point, we would like to show that neither side is without a degree of logic.

As we think about the fact that we explain that after the last Friday night lecture (attended by a corporal's guard of students) it is not surprising that the administration should have decided that there are so-called "student" members who can no longer attend. Students are almost desperately seeking a berth in the student body. And when we attempt to explain to the students why the administration is not surprising that the administration should have decided...

Mary Ann, "Like a Graceful Bird"

by Mary Ann Heuvelhorst

Now that I have had a taste of living at a college, I have to say that there is not much to complain about. I have enjoyed myself, met new people, and spent an athletic afternoon. I have been taught the virtues of "understanding," and have learned to get along with the fellows who...
Student Editors View World Scene

The 4th International Affairs Conference for College Editors took place on Feb. 9-11 in New York City, under the joint sponsorship of the New York University, the United States National Student Association, and the United Nations Department of Public Information. Including the Aquinas Herald, 144 student newspapers from 105 countries and territories were represented at this conference, which consisted of a series of seminars and addresses by prominent journalists and government officials.

"Reporting a World in Crisis." The seminars were divided according to six areas: Africa; the Sub-Saharan Africa; Asia and the Arab World; Asia; and the Central and Eastern Europe. Each seminar was comprised of four plenary sessions, panel discussions, special events, editors, and authors.

Professor, Student Achieve Awards

John Crider, better known as "Algy," to those who had the opportunity of seeing "The Import of Being Farm'd," has been awarded a one-year scholarship to Aquinas College. This award was given in recognition of his outstanding performance in this year's production, "Algy," which consisted of a series of one-act plays.

According to Mr. Kennedy of the Development Office, the donor wishes to remain anonymous. The scholarship was offered with the understanding that it might become an annual scholarship for students in speech and drama.

The following announcement has been received from the Pagament Press, Inc.

Aid's Available

The Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, an organization devoted to furthering the interests of Irish Colleens of 1962 in Grand Rapids, The contest is open to girls, 17-21 years of age, of Irish descent. Each contestant must also have a desire to go to college (those in college are also eligible).

Finalists will be selected on March 17th, and at a dinner in the Pan Fly Hotel, the winner will be named and awarded a full semester scholarship to Aquinas College. Entry forms can be obtained from John O'Donovan, Class of 1961, Chairman of the contest, or in the Aquinas library.

The Aquinas Alumni Association has undertaken a drive for juniors and seniors to preview some of the occupational opportunities open to them.

The determination of the students to take advantage of the opportunities in the world of work was especially apparent when they were told of the importance of the role of the student's ability to cope with the world of work.

The speaker, a member of the faculty, spoke on "What the Alumni Association Means to You."

Projects for the assemblies are: Tim Conway is the preferred profession; Dr. John Doyle is the selected profession.

A debate between two members of the Senior class, concerning their political aspirations and obligations to the community, was conducted by the members.

Political Workshops

The Social Science Forum, which sponsored the World's Fair Workshop at Aquinas, has scheduled a Democratic Workshop to be held on Mar. 27. Unlike the Republican Seminars, the Democratic meeting is scheduled for only one night and will be presented from a partisan viewpoint.

A debate between two members of the Senate, concerning their political aspirations and obligations to the community, was conducted by the members.
