For several Aquinas seniors, May means graduation and a new stage in their career. The following fall term offers new challenge, for their acquired knowledge will be put to the test in areas of specialization.

A high percentage of Aquinas plans to further their academic studies at graduate schools across the country. Sister鸽azga, O.P., philosophy head, has been aghast at the growth in the number of students entering the field of philosophy.

Through unshaken perseverance, they have proven themselves worthy of monetary support.

A Grand Rapids Junior College transfer student, Sister Clements, has been named recipient of the coveted $2,600 teaching fellowship for a summer orientation program. After obtaining her master's degree, Sister will be teaching on the college level.

At Our Lady of Lake College, a division of the Grand Rapids State University will welcome Josephine Weldon, O.P., to the substantial grant to continue his studies at Michigan State University.

Dan Radawski is the recipient of the $2,000 teaching fellowship, enabling him to obtain his master's degree in Micro-biology. A similar amount has been awarded to Larry Pelkowski, O.P., in the department of Biology.

A $2,000 teaching fellowship in French has been awarded to Mary George, a Grand Rapids student who is expected to attend Wayne State University.

Not only are students receiving grants into their graduate school, the college is offering scholarships to those who have a high percentage of Aquitas in their academic load. Sherry Pringle has been awarded a special grant from Middlebury to study in England for a summer orientation program. After obtaining her master's degree, Sister will be teaching on the college level.

You Bet Your Life

Within one year, over four million men, women, and children in America will be made ill or injured.

Nearly 5,000,000 people are injured in automobile accidents each year. It is only a matter of time before the next victim will be you.

This is the inevitable gamble of the highway, and the stakes are your very life.

The Traveler's Insurance Company has recently revealed a record 48,500 deaths on the nation's streets and highways in 1965. This figure is comparable to the annihilation of an entire population of Metukent or almost half of the inhabitants of Lamung. This large number of fatalities seems to reveal another aspect as well. Respect for life would appear to be rather negligible since Americans continue to ignore the reality. The destruction of an entire population each year is apparently irrelevant in the modern scene.

The fatality figure is a progressively heightened record of deaths and accidents, even though more and more safety measures are being taken.

Car manufacturers today have installed various precautionary measures to insure measurable driver safety. Highway construction has also been extended to aid this driver safety. But the most important element in safety measure has been uncooperative in the actual achievement of these goals.

Eighty per cent of all highway accidents are the sole result of driver errors. Probably 95 per cent of these errors are committed by only 18 per cent of all licensed drivers, are responsible for more than 30 per cent of all fatalities.

Remember—driving is a gamble. You bet your life. This game is for keeps.

Campus News Briefs

Two faculty members of Aquinas who have been on leave from the campus this year are continuing their leaves of absence.

Dr. Werner Prange, associate professor of German and geology, will be teaching at Aquinas this summer to teach high school students. He has been granted a leave of absence.

The AKC/USHEALTH received a telegram May 11 from Senator Philip A. Hart confirming the Aquinas College housing loan from the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The $325,000 will finance the construction of the Regina dormitory, which is to be completed by 1966.

Sandy Cavalleri also gave me the impression that she was completely enjoying every minute of being "Elvira." Using a high and falsetto voice and quite a few mannerisms, Sandy implied the airiness and fragility of both Elvira's composition and character.

Sandy's experience on the stage backed her technically and, in some ways, emotionally. In the opening scene, a few minutes after she was onstage, she never faltered or paused and begin to view her performance, and Sandy standing there.

Mrs. Bradman was on stage in totaluity also. Patricia Kremen­

The Spirit of Coward's Comedy

"The Gamble of the Highways"
On May 5 and 6 hundreds of Aquinas students exercised their rights as tuition-paying members of this educational institution when they flocked to the Student Center to attend and participate in a ceremony, May 16-21. The Aquinas stream was followed immediately by a noon. Dr. Earl E. Harper dedication was the formal dedication of "borrowed" rock over the Aquinas stream.

An effort at bridge-building, Aquinas-Engineer style. Mr. Robert Zimmerman seems to be professing awe at their surprise were unnecessary as he sipped lemonade.

The remainder of the week was filled* stomachs to a peak at 3;00 p.m., Friday, May 6, when the first finance meeting. When asked about his plans for the coming year Mr. Mattone emulated that he would like to create a new look for the Student Senate on campus by taking on more responsibility in areas where student initiatives are now lacking. To illustrate his point, Dom O'Brien talked with this reporter that the work of the Student Judiciary Board has been expanded with Administrative approval so that next year it will be try all cases involving offenses outside the dorms except expulsion.

Agreeing with Dom on the fact that the voice of student body, should be open to more study and to actively figuring out his approach for next year. When asked what he intends on contributing to the new look of the Senate, Mr. Hunsburger mentioned making a detailed report of Senate expenditures and revenue at each meeting, with publication of the above report in the CAPITAL 5. As a part of Mr. Mattone's official family, Jerry expressed his thanks to the electorate for their decision to put him in office, and declared he will do more than his best to keep this "public trust." Well, that was Election Day and the aftermath at Aquinas College: the cigars are now all gone, the lemonade is weakening due to melt-down, the cigars are now all gone, the lemonade is weakening due to melt-down, and the voting machine stands in the lower hall as a symbol of the turning tide of victory.

Moving quickly from the respite of Mr. Burns, the press raced over to 1607 Robinson Rd. S.E., destination: Regina Hall, to interview the girl who will keep the pencils sharpened, the corresponding secretary up to date, and Mr. Mattone graciously consented to meet the press.

This reporter would like to point out, however, that the President-elect was prepared for all outcomes, hurriedly changing from a black to blue-striped suit, and exchanging more spirited refreshments for the above-mentioned lemonade.

What more can one say than Congratulations to the four new officers: Mr. Mattone's "official family": (1. to r.) president Dominic Mattone, treasurer Jerry Hunsburger, vice president Gerry Burns, and secretary Cathy O'Brien.

College Sportsmen Boast 'Good Year'

The Mets, oh how we love the "Mets." Led by the rhythmic whippin arm of "Prof." Pumper and Joe O'Toole, the "old men" captured the M-I baseball title with a 9-1 record. And then there's the "Nate," the only team not only loved by everybody, but also by the rest of the league. Winsless for 3 consecutive years, the spirited unit looks forward to a strong recruit­ ing system next year, as they placed their entire squad on waivers.
