Participants will be required to design and construct their own sleds in competition on the campus grounds, Saturday, Feb. 18.

Participants representing the various clubs and organizations will be required to design and construct their own sleds in compliance with the length and height specifications pictured here. Derby participants will be voting for the team which creates one for their favorite track run, and the second for the most creative and well-built sled. Judging on the appearance and durability of the sled, however, will be placed all with the new team that has completed the race.

Each sled entered in the Derby will carry one driver and another occupant, and will be headed by a team of volunteer “huskies” representing the club or organization.

Any party interested in participating in the Klondike Derby is contacted to request Jan Williams, secretary to the Director of Wages, for applications and useful information.

An Island Among States

A scrubby island floating in the middle of a mineral-rich ocean — this is Appalachia, situated in the heart of that blessed land, America.

Here it is that grocery stores serve as churches, children still attend, sparsely populated though it may be, one-room schools, and families feel the chill of the winter wind pushing through the cracks of their one-room shack.

What a picture! It brings tears to the eyes and heavy feelings to the hearts of every American. That is why it is still exists.

It may be necessary to clarify that statement; it exists, but not without some attempt at solution by a few. One of these few is Father Keith Blasing of McKee, Lancaster, Erie, Pennsylvania, and his parish.

Fifteen years ago Father moved into mountainous eastern Kentucky to bring the word of God, to help improve the economic conditions, to prove that people still do "good" things. Last Thursday he came to Aquinas to tell students who are accustomed to their own, shoes and clothes, to eating in the sum-

Letter

Dear Modern Art Lovers,

What happened to the tradition of hanging traditional prints on the walls of the dormitories? Did the student population become so sick of it all that they decided to try a little more controversy? The new crop of students has replaced the old prints with works of modernism. The black and white? Now with the new ruling on Friday abstinence, one more decision has to be made: will the students participate in the Lenten season and fast from oil and eggs, or will they continue to fish on Friday to remind them of this fact. Others may prefer daily Mass, volunteer projects, or special efforts as their present occupations.

Christianity has become necessarily a way of life. It can have no longer the aura of the superlative job. So many Catholics practice voluntarily self-denial yet how many many have forgotten the preparatory purpose of the Advent season?

Since the Church has virtually eliminated compulsory pew markers, how many Catholics practice voluntary self-denial? How many maintain the practice of abstaining from meat on Friday or observing the Advent season?

Now with the new ruling on Friday abstinence, one more outward sign of a Catholic has been removed. In order to counterbalance the effects of this decree, there should notice that the bishops as a whole stressed the importance of the Friday abstinence and, while they withdrew the compulsory aspect of the penance, they strongly urged members of the Church to continue this practice voluntarily.

Gradually the "letter-of-the-law" Catholic religion is evolving into a way of life which demands that each person accept responsibility for his own faith, even if justifiable, objection to a student admission charge for the play — not because he was Ford, but because he...
Children Initiate Teachers-To-Be
by Cathy O'Brien

When the bell rings for the start of classes, it holds a new meaning for these seven seniors who spent the first half of the semester confined to the back of the building. These same students have suddenly been transformed into teachers.

Plunged into the cold world of the morning of Nov. 7, they seem to be helming their own. But the children of the Grand Rapids area, in this season of giving, seem to be presenting a real challenge to their student-teachers; will it be play or learning? At Shawmut Hills, Dan O'Brien says that his students are learning, and liking it in spite of themselves.

Eda Mayer's angular into the world of the teacher centers around this sixth grade at Breton Downs School, while Mary Jo Williams' regular schedule of fourth graders at St. Thomas. Mary Jo will begin teaching full-time at St. Tomm in January. Lending an ear for some delightful observations on her newly acquired "tricks of the trade" are the students of the teachers who often seem to get involved in a lunch-table discussion of the teaching profession.

Participation has become a word for Mary Ellen Miles, who has been assigned the first grade for three years now. The seventh-grade students at Lourdes have often been drafted into participating in these sessions, and it is a great deal of success. They are stationed at Breton Downs to discuss making Christmas tree ornaments, and for Mary Ellen's friends at Lourdes, Mary Ellen's sympathetic friends at Lourdes, the group last Tuesday when the Sacrament.

"Am I right, teach?" demands one of the fourth graders at St. Thomas School who have, at latest report, warmed their way into the heart and record book of their practice teacher, Miss Mary Jo Williamson.

Sandra Training Program
Accommodates Nine States

Mr. Robert Zimmerman, former Saga Food manager, has been promoted to manager of a Saga Training Program which has recently been established at the college.

Aquinas has been designated as a training center for a nine-state area: Michigan, Indiana, Ohio, Illinois, Kentucky, among other nearby states. This nine state area also includes a training center at Western Illinois University. The purpose of the thirty-day training program, now in operation at Aquinas, is to give the prospective Saga Food Manager an awareness of Saga Systems and operations.

During the first week, the trainee is versed in orientation, company history, and sanitation practices. This may explain why the newly-arrived trainee is first seen in the dormitory.

The second and third weeks are spent in the kitchen. Here the trainee learns food production, working with the baker, cooks and salad ladies. During this period he may also be observed working on the serving line. During the last week he is "acquainted with accounting methods.

At the end of each week the trainee takes a comprehensive written exam and must achieve at least 80 percent. He is under constant evaluation during all the stages of the program, putting in a 12-14 hour workday and a six-day week.

The following are prospective managers who have already completed the training program: Mike Kouri, Cincinnati; Jerry Bernson, Ishpeming; Rob Costa, Florida; Mary Johnson, Rochester; and Ernie Westman, Benton. Gains Support Of Young Set

"The 25th Hour" is a coffee house located at 101 Wealthy on the corner of Sheldon. Some Grand Rapids regulars may remember a Sinclair Gas Station in that area. It is to receive the home of the young adult set.

These young adults gather in the "gothic" atmosphere created by dark walls, modern art, low tables, and noisy heater. The atmosphere seems to stimulate talk. About love, life, songs, poetry, and discussions. Success can be tabulated in number of students involved. The "young set" have poetry, as have Aquinas and Calvin students. Numerous others have contributed their talents.

Success can be tabulated in terms of numbers, dollars, or purpose. In all three the "The 25th Hour" has been a success, but the real success is in the"The 25th Hour".. All qualified students are urged to take advantage of the offer.
