One of Aquinas' most beloved and influential leaders died last week, according to a statement from the Jane Hibbard Idema Women's Studies Center. Idema was head of the center from its establishment in 1995 until her death on March 8, 2010, at the age of 70. She was a professor of history at Grand Rapids Community College for 38 years and a leader in the women's rights movement. Idema was a strong advocate for women's education and gender equality.

"Idema took the lead," said Susan Hawes-Howe, director of the center. "She was an incredible role model." Howe said that Idema was a tireless advocate for women's issues, and that she was involved in an enormous amount of work with the center and other organizations.

"At that time a small group of women were put in connection in Margaret, Iowa," said Sister Yvonne Flowers, who was involved in the center's founding. "It's hard to say what kind of impact she had on the community," Howe said. "But she did a lot for the community and the community recognized the need for broadening the role of women in society." Howe said that Idema was recognized for her dedication to women's rights and gender equality.

Idema was involved in the women's rights movement during World War II, she served in the American Red Cross in the European theater during World War II, and she was head of the Jane Hibbard Idema Women's Studies Center.

Idema's daughter, Jane Hibbard Idema, former professor and Director of Encore and Emeritus, said that her mother was always a strong advocate for women's issues, and that she was involved in an enormous amount of work with the center and other organizations.

Idema was the daughter of Margaret and her father, whom she called "Dad," was a minister. She was a lifelong resident of Grand Rapids, and she was a professor of history at Grand Rapids Community College for 38 years and a leader in the women's rights movement. Idema was a strong advocate for women's education and gender equality.

"We're sad in her passing," said Susan Hawes-Howe, director of the center. "But we think of her often and we will miss her very much." Howe said that Idema was a tireless advocate for women's issues, and that she was involved in an enormous amount of work with the center and other organizations.

Terror, freedom and "Metta." Just some of the buzz words that made up President Bush's State of the Union address.

According to — well — no, you didn't miss anything.

But, missing the speech wasn't an option. In an era that is almost impossible to tune out on TV, if you are a channel surfer, President Bush gave his address on the state of our union. And it was an address that carried a lot of weight and a lot of meaning. The speech was an address that carried a lot of weight and a lot of meaning.

[LETTER TO THE EDITOR]

To the Editor,

I was very disappointed with the recent edition of The Saint. The content was not as thorough as I had expected. The articles were not well written and did not cover the topics thoroughly. I hope that future editions will improve.

[LETTER TO THE EDITOR]

To the Editor,

I think the Saint is a great publication and I really enjoy reading it. However, I feel that the articles could be more informative and the layout could be improved.

The Grand Rapids Art Museum is all dressed up

By Stephanie Gerling

The world of costumes is ever-evolving and moving along. Typically, the events and their dances are the main focus, but there are many other important aspects of this theme that go unnoticed. The Great Rapids Art Museum is focusing on one visual area of themes for their latest exhibit: "Fashion in Film." Present Costumes from the years feature thirty-six costumes from the London costume house, Cosprop Ltd. Some costumes featured are from such popular filmmakers Hitchcock, Ford, Park, and Friis. Looking at the costumes in our line, we can see that the costumes aren't given the credit they deserve on screen. A beautifully adorned dress with a wedding dress, pants, design, and all making each costume dramatically different from the others.

The master and his creation: Andy Goldsworthy stands with the Grand Rapids Arch.

Goldsworthy's imaginative experiments and designs with a natural theme to travel for the sake of his art, is the inspiration AFS was going for with this project. AFS, run by volunteer Alana Goldsmith, is a meditative dance and highly improvisational because of the concept it is based on. The band is headlining a tour this month that will take them around the country along with their bands Boys Night Out, Chiodos, and Armor for Sleep. Both Aquinas women teams are looking to improve their 2005 success this year as the men's team's presence looms large.

WOMEN LOOK TO ADVANCE USING POST-SUCCESS

The men's roster may be young and inexperienced, but head coach Jim Boylen, with 13 years of experience and more than 15 years of head coach Jerry Hendrick, the former head coach of Detroit, are all part of their regional and national connections.

Hendrick has maintained the Aquinas men's team at the forefront of college basketball and has brought in some of the best and brightest in the nation.
