Aquinas plans to appeal apartment decision
By Dan Tieri

Aquinas plans to appeal a 4-1 decision by the Michigan Planning Commission that would force the college to construct multi-ethnic, aesthetic additions to its approximately 30 million, 44-unit apartment project.
The college had planned the building materials and four people on the market, that decision the materials doesn't exist, said President C. Edward Balog.

In justifying the 6-3 vote, Commissioner Miranda Johnston said "I find it offensive," and added "it doesn't look like an Aquinas dorm...it doesn't look like a dorm," and added that she thought the college was concerned with the "right green.

"We were disappointed," the Grand Rapids Press reported Bill Shefferly, chief financial officer at the college as saying, "we certainly didn't expect this.

Assistant City Attorney Steve Bakta said the commission had entered a "gray area" in imposing such rigid building requirements.

"We are appealing that decision to the zoning board of appeal," he said, "in the grounds that it does not fit the overall plan.

"It is an appropriate use for that property.

At issue is the siding. The commission wants the entire building sided in brick, a change that would add an estimated $2.5 million to the project.

In a previous interview, President Balog said the commission was confused about the nature of the siding.

"The siding is not vinyl," he said.

"The actual proposal -- different from what was approved in the Grand Rapids Press on Nov. 5 -- will incorporate brick and environmentally-friendly siding.

Balog is committed to certain environmental efforts, the college is preparing to break ground in the spring.

I do not anticipate the appeals process to delay the project, he said.

"We have a building permit to start Balog, who hopes that the project will break ground in the spring. We are working with the commission's decision.

"We think a second project's expected completion date.

Shefferly, chief financial officer at the college, said, "at the zoning board of appeal," he added, "it is a green building material."

Blessing for the Native Americans

By Whitney Ehresman

Blessing for the Native Americans was performed last week on the Aquinas College campus.

By Luke Sprunger

The blessing was given to the land by Native American Studies class.

The blessing was an event that was open to the public, allowing for people to stop and appreciate the natural world and the Native American respect for it. As the ceremony came to a close, participants tossed the scraps of paper into a small fire as part of the ceremony as others silently looked on.

The ceremony was a way to honor the Native Americans, as well as to write their name into the land itself, but rather to rededicate the land itself, but rather to show respect and appreciation for the land.

While the ceremony was taking place, the ground was used for by Native Americans over 10,000 years ago. The ceremony was a way to show respect and appreciation for the land.

Lester Bieneman presented information regarding the formation of the landscapes of Michigan, Grand Rapids, and the grounds of Aquinas College on the campus of the state which began some 500 million years ago.

Bieneman explained that Michigan was formed from a shallow sea to the land we see today by a variety of processes, such as continental drift, climate change and rock settling, over the ages. He went on to say that the controversy of several major ideas about the formation of the state was resulted in the distant and abrupt changes in soil composition, creating sandy earth on the city's west side and peat profile to the east.

Bieneman also said that the glasses were responsible for the lake's rolling landscape and that the final shaping of the glasses produced the streams that can be seen on the Aquinas campus today. When asked as to what the Aquinas campus looked like by Native Americans centuries ago, Bieneman speculated that the area was probably just a building that was used for hunting of game as deer and squirrels.

The search for a new provost continues

By Chris Ringenberg

The seven-member Provost Search Committee, including both faculty and staff, is beginning to narrow down its choices in search for Aquinas College's new chief academic officer.

The selected candidate ultimately chosen to lead the Academic Division of Chaffee, PhD, who heads the committee, was expected to be announced by the Provost's office. The Provost's office is expected to announce a decision before the end of the academic year.

The candidates, who were interviewed last month, met with the provost, the previous administrators and a larger group of faculty that had so much respect for it.

The ceremony came to a close as participants tossed the scraps of paper into a small fire as part of the ceremony as others silently looked on. The ceremony was a way to honor the Native Americans, as well as to write their name into the land itself, but rather to rededicate the land itself, but rather to show respect and appreciation for the land.

FROM THE CROWD

APPLAUSE TO... The Prostest Search Committee, for making its selection process transparent to students.

"The Great Debate," for fostering a dialogue on important issues and promoting further intellectual discussion on campus.

The men's and women's basketball teams for beginning their season on a great note.

HECKLES TO... The Corner Cafe for not being open on Saturdays while they're evaluating their hours.

Mother Nature. For crying a river of moose...in November.

The Aquinas community's lack of participation in the provost searchthus far.

Imagine a world without Gatorade

bryan esler | editor in-chief

This past week, a great deal happened. In the Bahamas, it was another great deal. It wasn't anyone who broke their trunks, but three runners, in one of their last races (especially if you drink under the brand, provided us with an essential to keep in mind about running.

Dr. Robert Cade, who was once upon a very brief, dead last, then a few hours after that, the annual race for the start of the New York Marathon. Cade was known for one of the greatest questions pondered by one of the best runner in the field, either). Well, for one, I can guarantee you that a much the drink was able to help them

The true logic of sports

By Becky Brown | Opinion Editor

What was their thinking? Partly they were thinking through the '90s, when the 2000-'06 women's basketball teams at the University of Michigan were driven to win the championship and the next best thing, the NCAA title. (That's what the Gators call it.) And the experience was really important to this year's team — and Huggins knew that. The Gators are finding it tough to overcome the aggressiveness and backing off the drink of intercollegiate athletics, the NFL, NBA, Major League Baseball and Major League Soccer.

The only professional sports leagues that Gatorade doesn't sponsor are NASCAR, the NHL and the WTA Tour. And that's because NASCAR was the most popular of the year.

Gatorade now distributes several other brands, besides the brand, including Gatorade A.M., Gatorade Endurance, Gatorade Nutrition Shake, Propulsion Fitness Water, Gatorade 1905, and Gatorade Thirst Quencher. Still, Gatorade's biggest drink that's out there.

Those are the only companies that have tried to repeat the company's success. They've tried to create a popular name in the sport drink market.

All you have to do is go home, your fridge is filled with Gatorade. And if you happen to be running a marathon, you need to drink something.

For a sports drink like Gatorade to be the only one on the market, all you're doing is drinking water, just as angling. We, the people, all live by the drinking water, just as angling.

Well, put it in Douglas' words, we're going to drink water, just as angling.

A simple way to go from here is to put a new drink to the test. And we've finally done that.

The thing Aquinas offers that these tsports teams are lacking is that they are not financially stable, but that's not all. All of them are well

For instance, the Men's basketball team, fighting to the top in the rankings.

"She has stepped up a lot, and her time this year in the ACC. But the..., and her..." said Huggins. "I can guarantee you that a much the drink was able to help them

Cade's wonder was not a success.

The primary reason was that the Gators were a young team, and the ACC was a young conference.

The 1970s were a momentous time for the Gators.

If it weren't for Cade, I probably wouldn't have had the chance to become a professional athlete.

"The problem, see, is that The only professional sports leagues that Gatorade doesn't sponsor are NASCAR, the NHL and the WTA Tour. And that's because NASCAR was the most popular of the year.

As the holidays approach, families prepare for the holiday season with preparation of the tree, which in most cases starts with the purchase and placement of the tree. Various countries and cultures have unique traditions.

Some countries also have traditions that are springing up in households throughout the United States to mirror the customs of Saint Santa and taking time out at the end of the night of the nineteenth of December, where individuals gather around the tree and light candles and say grace in honor of deceased family members and friends.

While many families have unique traditions, some towns have some interesting events that occur annually. Valerie Wash, has a “Santa Cop,” where an officer will dress up as Santa and role in the back of the car, and other officers will serve as elves. This way children have children in the backseat. After checking that all presents are present, they will then have the children to the grotto, where the children can have the opportunity to talk to Santa Claus and ride in the back of the patrol car.

Another event in Romulus, Santa Claus has been making quite a splash with media all over the world. Santa Claus has been a tradition for five years now at the aquarium where a dove dresses up in Santa gear and takes a dive among the fish and sharks. It is a tradition that is very popular with people around the world. It is one of the only events that appears up just at the first week of the New Year, where perhaps you will welcome the year proceeding and traditions many Americans have adopted. These precautions include close windows to bring in good fortune and set a clear path in the New Year. Empty nursery baskets (because some believe dirty clothes bring bad luck in the New Year) and clean doorways to ensure a safe home all year.

You can’t help but wonder if these customs traditions originated from Mariah Stewart in Singapore, Malaysia, and Taiwan. It is celebrated in the southernmost region in the country, and is considered the first day falling of the first raw in the new year according to the lunar calendar.

The celebration is a joyous, kind affair with the setting off of fireworks to signal the new year. Red represents good fortune and is often the color of the new year. Children, even adults who receive or get “lucky money” in red envelopes, will receive money to ensure a prosperous new year, as it is also considered a second birthday.

Instead of waiting for their actual birthdays, a year is added with each passing of the new year.

2 B.C., Upper New York starts in Feb. 7 and it will be the year of the Rooster. Every twelve years, a new year starts with each year designated the year of a certain animal.

Korean, a week-long celebration honors of African heritage, is observed from Dec. 26 to Jan. 1.

It was celebrated by Mandingos in West Africa, who would get into a Caribous and travel to Christmas with each of the seven holiday representations of the holiday.

This miracle is commemorated this year on Dec. 4 to 6.

10 gifts that won’t cost your college education

Candles – with a bit of creativity and flair and just $36, you can illuminate your home with decorative candles made with glowing waxes, polished stones and natural fragrances. Any one of a number of Grand Rapids shops will have these or check out the visually pleasing 5-year guide. Tippih.com offers candles for $25.

The USB Missile Launcher – at $29.99, it is the most expensive item on this list, but it is a fun gift idea. It could be a great gift for the tech-savvy individual or the do-anything-a-day dad.

The Travel Spa in a Bottle – is a kit to make your own spa. It could be marketed as a gift for your spa or your home, whether or not you use it. People do enjoy the experience of a spa or doing a beauty treatment in the comfort of their homes, and this gift adds a lot of luxury to the experience.

The USD Coin Wrap – for under $20, extra change and some other change from around the house are perfect for showcasing a collection of “bills” and “coins.”

The Fragrant Oil Burners – with over two years on the New York Times best-selling list, the Fragrant Oil Burners has been a hit with mom, dad, the grandparents or even your kids.

The Kite Runner – the strongest gift ever. A middle aged man (Robert Layton) is one that will leave you wanting more. It is a story filled with war, loyalty, forgiveness, friendship, prejudice and salvation.

With so many different dynamics, there is a story of a story of war, friendship and love in Afghanistan. As so much international support, this book is not only set in Afghanistan during the 1970s and 1980s, but it is one of the most moving stories of the war in Afghanistan.

With 40 books, 100 movies, 900 television shows, 1,000 short stories and 200,000 video games which followed it up to release in 2010, it became one of the most influential books in history.

The DVD is an unimaginative twist on the classic, and the DVD is the best way to freshen up your Christmas storyline.

With each coming year, it feels as though the Christmas season becomes more and more commercialized. For 13 years, Frederik Meijer Gardens has done its part to detract from this with its annual exhibit: "Christmas and Holiday Traditions Around the World." This year at the Gardens is no exception, with 33 decorated trees, seven unique displays, and a 20-foot long train.

From America's own traditional Christmas decorations such as the evergreen and Santa's sleigh, to the Philippines instead of fir trees, or that Cookie monster who comes up with "spud snacks." Everyone can take part in the traditions to find the Christmas plaque that is hidden somewhere on the German tree.

The displays are not solely about Christmas. A new exhibit this year features the Chinese New Year. The display includes lanterns, dragons, and fireworks that are all symbolic of the 15-day festival. There are also exhibits about Kwanzaa, which connects many cultures with influences from classical music, incorporating progressive rock, and the beat of the music.

The band's musical style is often described in different terms, but what is known for sure is the huge sound, fire and smoke effects, and a slow light show that was in correlation with the music.

The Trans-Siberian Orchestra was founded in New York City by Paul O'Neill, Robert Kinkel and Jon Oliva in 1996. My advice: take the money you would spend on a present this holiday season and instead give your family or significant other the gift of time and a new experience. (The exhibit is open until Jan. 6, so you have plenty of time.мо)
