The last deadline

This issue marks my last as an editor of The Saint, as I will be spending a semester in Ireland. The occasion is bittersweet, and I will miss the work, as well as how much fun I have had working with and learning editorial team's leadership.

There is no stronger bond of friendship, so I hope that, before I leave, I have spent the past few weeks here with you. I have had a chance to travel, meet new people, and immerse myself in the Irish culture. The Saint has been a source of support, encouragement, and even emotional comfort during this time. We have worked hard to keep the newspaper running smoothly, and I am grateful for the opportunity to have been a part of this journey.

The Saint is a testament to the dedication and hard work of our staff and contributors. We have published numerous articles, features, and editorials that reflect the values and concerns of our readers. We have covered a wide range of topics, from local events to global issues. We have sought to provide a platform for diverse voices and perspectives, and we have tried to promote critical thinking and informed dialogue.

Looking back, I am proud of the work we have done as a team. We have faced challenges and overcome obstacles, and I believe we have grown stronger as a result. We have learned from each other, and we have supported each other through difficult times. I am grateful for the experience and I hope it will serve me well in the future.

As I move on to the next chapter of my life, I want to express my gratitude to everyone who has been a part of this journey. I want to thank our staff members, contributors, and advertisers for your support and encouragement. I want to thank our readers for your engagement and participation. I want to thank our families and friends for their love and support. I want to thank our community for your kindness and hospitality.

I look forward to seeing The Saint continue to thrive and grow in the future. I hope it will continue to be a source of inspiration and enlightenment for all who read it. I hope it will continue to be a symbol of our commitment to free and independent journalism.

Finally, I would like to thank all of you for your support and encouragement. I hope you will continue to follow our progress and support our work. I hope you will continue to be a part of The Saint's future. I hope you will continue to be a part of our community.

I will miss you all, and I will miss The Saint. But I am confident that it will continue to flourish and thrive. I am confident that it will continue to be a force for good in our community. I am confident that it will continue to be a symbol of our commitment to free and independent journalism.
ELEPHANT IN THE CAMPUS POLITICAL PRESENCE DURING THE ELECTION

By Stephanie Georgiev

The Saint Reporter

The past presidential election was a historic one. The candidates battled for voters' minds, wallets, and desires in debates. While the candidates were battling across the nation, these were smaller but just as influential contests on a different type of battlefield - the college campus.

Aquinas College has required their voter during this election. They have been involved in the college's political scene for the past few years. In this recent election, 235 voters out of 356, or approximately 66%, voted on election day, exceeding the college's early vote in the election since 2004.

One recent video to become a forum was to be presented by freshman Helperly Hanley. Hanley, who is also a candidate in the campus student body, stated that she knew she wanted to join a political discussion. Many freshmen, want to be a part of the beginning of the year to become involved in student politics.

“I decided to sign up for AQ Dems because I was interested in hearing more about the college student body and running for office. It is an exciting time,” said Helperly Hanley.

Student Senate plans events

With homecoming, the presidential election and Student Senate Committee Director Michelle Gilcrease above on the list of new group initiatives, Student Senate is looking to change their past pursuits, and by the end of mid-term, the group will be more structured, focused, and will feature guest lecturers.

On Tuesday, Dec. 17 at 7 p.m., Student Senate will host the Speakers Series talk: “Thinking Outside the Box” which will be held on the second floor of the Wege Center. The series is a newly added event that highlights new connections to the College and current thought leaders. The Chemistry and Special Events Committees will work together to put on this program.

The opportunity is to choose a country and explore their cultural traditions. The country's holiday traditions: the town will be decorated, and the doors-decorated fall will be brought to the group. The group will happen on Monday, Dec. 15th for students and faculty to enjoy.

Throughout the year, Senate members will be brought to meetings and events and at a learning opportunity for students to present to peers.

“Senators have been invited to the campus and asked if they have a political event on the horizon,"" said Dr. Michael Wolf from BRAIN, the organization that hosts the Speaker Series.

As ADHD is classified as a developmental disorder, there are now levels of attention disorders,” said Aquinas professor Timothy Bennett. “The first is Attention Deficit Disorder, or ADD, which is characterized by impulsivity and a lack of concentration and focus.”

The second level is ADHD, which is very similar to ADD, with the exception of hyperactivity. ADHS also known as ADDH, is a disorder that occurs only in America. The ability to inspire other people is among the most important skills I have. I’ve always enjoyed teaching in the classroom and I have worked with students and professionals in my field.

In terms of new clubs, the new Culinary Arts Club has been added to the AQ community of severe weather enthusiasts. The club meets on a regular basis to discuss and share information about severe weather. The club is open to anyone interested in severe weather, regardless of their level of experience.

The Culinary Arts Club provides an opportunity for students and professionals to connect with others who share a passion for severe weather. The club also offers a platform to share knowledge and experiences related to severe weather. The club has been well-received and has already attracted a number of members.

In the near future, Campus Safety Director Tony Nolan hopes to further improve the standards of A.C.E. services at Aquinas College. He has been working diligently to address the concerns of students and staff, and he is committed to making the campus a safer and more enjoyable place for everyone.

PC: I am a collector of quotes so I have many famous quotes that guide my life. For example, I believe in the quote “If you want to see what a country is like, ask its kids.” - Nelson Mandela. I have often applied this quote to my life and it has inspired me to make a positive impact on the world.

Our club is doing well and I am excited to see what the future holds. In the next few years, I hope to see our club continue to grow and become more active on campus.

In summary, our club has been successful in its mission to provide community service opportunities for CE students. We have held events such as the Habitat for Humanity build and the food drive, and we are looking forward to hosting more events in the future.

Many have marked the last few days as the final corner for bailing out the auto industry, or not. There has been much debate over whether the government money given to the industry has been spent wisely or not. The GM bankruptcy has been a topic for days and it is far from being an isolated event. The industry and different opinions about the auto government should play in the market. But helping the industry is no longer a question of structures - it is a question of practicality. The American auto industry, both directly and indirectly, is responsible for more than three million jobs.

General Motors, the largest of the Three, and the one most in the public eye, is not alone. No other auto manufacturer is in such obvious danger. Its bankruptcy would not necessarily cause panic. In the past, there were once millions of Ford Model T's, but no one panicked then. GM would not be bailed out immediately, but it’s possible.

If GM were a normal company, it could file for chapter 11 bankruptcy and take time for what one called a “little breathing room.” It would mean GM would have time to reorganize and retool, and cut out those business practices and those unneeded factories. There’s no chapter 11 in GM’s future. It has run out of time. Old habits, the psychological effect of a business and its economic impact, and those aren’t ordinary times.

In most chapter 11 bankruptcies, a company is able to get out of debt and save the money for the immediate obligations. However, with the credit crisis facing the world now, GM may not be able to get out of debt and save the money for the immediate obligations. Old habits, the psychological effect of a business and its economic impact, and those aren’t ordinary times.

The argument against toyin is not only misleading in terms of personal concern for society, the financial industry was in need of a bailout. The GM bankruptcy would severely threaten the hopes and futures of the American people - and the economy of the nation as a whole.

Auto industry bailout critical for American workers

Quantum of Solace gives Bond a new face

By Ben Stoltman
The Saint Reporter

I walked into the movie theater knowing I was going to be surprised by this Bond, but nothing could have prepared me for what I beheld. The 22nd Bond — Quantum of Solace — started as all Bonds should — with an Aston Martin-fueled chase scene. I can’t say I was as impressed as I though I’d be, mostly due to the close camera shots and continuous choppy cuts, giving a definite sense of excitement, but I was left with no clue as to what I was excited beheld. The opening sequence and theme alone are enough to make any Bond fan gasp at a state of transcendental grace. Overall, the directing style gives the film a very graceful feel, using both lighting and color to tell a sub-story. But, some of the chase scenes — as well as numerous interesting shots. — took me out of the film for just enough time to count.

Detroit is the pre-season favorite. Head coach Walter Davis has his team prepared for several good competitions in the Grand Rapids area. The Pistons will also play against Parker-Calvin on Wed., Dec. 5 at the Palace at 7 p.m.

He’s talking about championships. At press conferences and in interviews, the talking heads are all talking about the title run. Now, this has nothing to do with the Pistons. Detroit is at age 30 and NBA fans to its credos. Detroit is practically its last (and best) chance to win it all. So it doesn’t come as a surprise that it’s all about the championship run.

Say what you will about Allen Iverson. He’s always been a ‘take him or love him’ type of player, but there are undeniable fact. He’s a player who can make the difference between a championship run and a losing season for both the Pistons and the X-Factor.

In recent years, what has been the one ‘knock on the Piston’? They didn’t have a player who could score at will. Now, this doesn’t automatically put the Pistons in the playoffs, but with Iverson on the team, there’s a chance.

The Aquinas women’s basketball team is Ranked 12 in the nation based on last few months performance. The Saints have soared against Sierra Nevada, Montana State, and California. This in turn has brought Allen Iverson to the Pistons in the finals, we all know that. But, there are things that must be considered.
