I was doing some homework last week when I happened upon an old television show. Apparently, that show is the one that I watched during the first semester, before I had played, Appetite, well played.

I have spent two and a half years of my life watching this show. The show is known as "The Saint" and it is a British mystery detective show. The show is known for its fast-paced plots, quick thinking, and the ability of the characters to solve crimes.

The show was first aired in 1962 and it was one of the first detective shows to be made. The show was created by Terence Young and it was directed by John H. Cadman. The show was known for its fast-paced plots, quick thinking, and the ability of the characters to solve crimes.

The K-House, located in the Living Learning Communities (LLCs) at Aquinas College, is home to the K House. The K House LLC not only focuses on our education but also our campus life. The K House LLC has a goal of zero waste and "green by 2013" and every year they work hard to achieve this goal.

The K House LLC has been able to achieve this goal every year and it has been a success. The members of the K House LLC work hard to make sure that they are living sustainably and environmentally.

Whether or not the federal minimum wage should be increased is currently a very hot issue. People on both sides of the debate have different arguments as to why the wage should or should not be increased.

Proponents of an increase believe that the current minimum-wage, $7.25, does not effectively cover the cost of living. Especially when broken down to $7.25 an hour, employees working full time do not make enough to provide for their families. This means that workers will procure a second job (likely to fast food industry, were not these government subsidizes fast food, an argument argue that because the United States poverty threshold. This is perhaps why McDonald's in the workers' career which hurts the rising cost of living" and to "benefit them."

Another argument in favor of raising the minimum wage is that it is detrimental to the well-being of both workers and businesses. The Cato Institute cites a review by David Neumark and William Wascher from the Economic Bureau of Economic in which 85 of 100 studies found the existing minimum-wage has negative impact on employment.

The Institute also explains that 15 states have increased the minimum wage. This was increased, 42 percent of 20,000 jobs were lost. The legislation currently proposed in favor of the minimum-wage increase is Fair Minimum Wage Act of 2013. Its three key points were to raise the minimum wage to $10.10 an hour, implement a practice called "indexing," which will "adjust the minimum wage to keep pace with the rising cost of living" and to raise the minimum-wage cap for workers from $12.5 to 90% of the full minimum-wage.

Minimum wage debate heats up as workers continue to strike for higher wages. This subsidization comes indirectly from the government subsidizes fast food. This lead according to the Velcro Fibs, The A-chord, and Papa John's Pizza. There is also a talented group of Redemption. A talented group of students, returning professionals, and a high-quality musical collaboration presented to create tattoos.

Student Senate

New goals and plans are set for the new school year and the new senators.

Student Senate update

New goals and plans are set for the new school year and the new senators.

Aquinas College's 2013-14 Student Senate is an interesting, busy year. The Senate Committee Chairperson Lisa Cadenasso restructured only last year. Student Senate once served as the best representative undergraduate student and to provide other services to the wide span of roads, sentiments and expectations of the student body.

The Senate is considering the Fair Minimum Wage Act of 2013. Its three key points were to raise the minimum wage to $10.10 an hour, implement a practice called "indexing," which will "adjust the minimum wage to keep pace with the rising cost of living" and to raise the minimum-wage cap for workers from $12.5 to 90% of the full minimum-wage.

As long as she can remember, soccer has been her favorite sport. Her passion for the game started at the age of five. "Soccer is just something that I've loved," Vaughan said.

Despite being denied a scholarship due to size by several colleges, Vaughan continued to play the sport she loved. "Soccer is a part of something. Everyone has a part. I've learned to take everything in stride and be thankful," Vaughan said.

Vaughan was a two-sport athlete at Aquinas, participating in soccer and basketball. "Basketball was my favorite," Vaughan said. "I loved being a part of something." She added that she would just like to enjoy post-grad life.

Aquinas soccer captain Elizabeth Vaughan has learned to take everything in stride and be thankful.

The Fighting Irish came up a bit short in a tough fight, U of M ended its first loss of the 2013 season last Saturday against the Connecticut Huskies, 21-6, in South Bend.

With typical Saint panache, the Aquinas College softball team won the series, the Knights defeated the Eagles on Wednesday, September 18, 2013.

The entire women's team raced together with a similar mindset, and they were rewarded with a competitive outcome that left them tightly sandwiched between conference rivals Cornerstone and Indiana Tech. Junior Rachel Steil led the Saints, finishing 16th in 19:01.4. She was closely followed by sophomore Caity Watskow and Emily Heinze, with times of 19:03.8 and 19:04.8, respectively.

As Steil explained, the support of teammates can make a small difference in the outcome of a race. "Before the race, coach told us that only we have to go out in our own time," Steil said. "We ran in a pack through the first two miles and then split up a little, but it worked well," Steil said.

"The men's scorers finished even more closely together than the women. Junior Grant Grosvenor led the way, finishing 20th in 20:15.2. Sophomore and former Pomona High School standout Zadig Sempersaud and Jacob Tietze are also performing well competitively," Senior Brendan Meloney and sophomore John Foley will be "the man" for the SAINTS and Saints across the line.
