Cuisine and media representation: this year's Soul Food Sunday

The Center for Diversity and Inclusion brought in Dr. Sherri Williams of Wake Forest University to speak on the media's portrayal of people of color. While Kwiatkowski believes inistributor, this idea was also brought up later in the discussion, but Kwiatkowski said even if it was required for all students to take a self-defense course, there was no way to ensure everyone came to it or took it seriously. He added that students don't take Campus Safety seriously in general, citing examples like low attendance to Campus Safety events and students dislike for the officers because of how often they ticket people. "Seeing other officers won't change how people view Campus Safety," Kwiatkowski said.

Many members of the audience were wary about officers having guns on campus. "Arming our officers won't change anything," Kwiatkowski said. "Arming our officers won't change our campus safety officers' ability to prevent them from shooting anyone," he said, "because the college could look into making something like that already exists." The officer said that the officer's goal was to make everyone safer without arming officers, such as teaching students self-defense techniques in dangerous situations. To arm or not to arm: Farrah were mostly focal in: To arm officers about the initiative to arm Campus Safety officers. Another eight were in favor for annual updates on the weapons.

If the initiative passes: Only full-time Campus Safety officers would be armed.

Campus Safety officers will not have arresting powers.

Full-time officers and students officers would wear different uniforms.

Conversation on campus: Arming Campus Safety Officers

Story by Jane Johnston

Staff Writer

While or not Campus Safety officers should be armed with firearms is up for debate right now around campus. It is a topic on the agenda for the September Board of Trustees meeting; however, this policy will not be decided on this day. The meeting will be held on Feb. 19th to celebrate with soul food made by LT's BBQ & Catering.

The annual event lives up to these expectations and tries its best to not be a carbon copy of past events. This year's event is unique in that it will be held on Feb. 19th, the day following MLK Jr. Day.

Latoya Booker, Director of the Center for Diversity and Inclusion, and the Board of Trustees were the initiators of the idea. Booker said that the idea was inspired by the success of the 2017 Academy Awards.

Aquinas Professor publishes new book

Dr. Victor Karandashev, a professor of psychology at Aquinas College, releases "Romantic Love in Cultural Contexts."

"I wanted to make a comprehensive coverage of how people in various historical periods and modern cultures in the world understand and experience romantic love," said Dr. Karandashev. "The information was not easily available before, but finally I discovered a vast amount of interesting data about various cultural practices."

"During the conference, a senior editor of Springer International Publishing approached me and asked to write a book on this topic," said Dr. Karandashev. "I took two years for Karandashev to write the manuscript for "Romantic Love in Cultural Contexts."

"I enjoy the writing process on the topic of stuff really interests," he said. "It was a challenging process since I am not a good writer and English is not my native tongue."

"In the final stages of writing his book, Dr. Karandashev worked with Nicholas Finska (Aquinas '16), a former research intern in the psychology department."

"Dr. Karandashev said that it was his wife, Tatiana, who inspired him to write and learn more about love. "I honestly acknowledge the inspiration, which my beloved wife Tatiana provided me many years ago when I fell in love with her," said Dr. Karandashev. "That time, 37 years ago, I was a young scholar and promised her to write a book about love, and she occasionally reminded me when for three years."

"I was busy with other projects for a long time, but still I promised, and finally did it, severely from her to make it a reality."

Dr. Karandashev's book is available through other online at Springer International Publishing.

The life of an RSO

Looking at what it takes to create and maintain a Registered Student Organization.

"Many clubs were established years ago, at least in name, but there are plenty of brand new RSOs each year."

"Club members are usually not too shy about creating new clubs. "It is good to be informed as to how they work," Gimby clarifies. "RSOs do require much to get started, so any interested is starting to wonder if those about the process, there are only a few key things they need to know."

"First, an RSO requires at least four members who are willing to act as the RSO's officers and one for the faculty advisor. On the Campus Life website, there is a form to fill out to begin the process. Once all forms are properly submitted, the RSO is essentially a "good club" that is likely to be approved — under a major concern. — by the Campus Life Council made up of AQA students and student affairs staff.

"As of today's date, there are about 150 RSOs, and there are many more. For instance, in four or five years, some organizations are established every semester, sometimes even more. It should be noted that many of these RSOs are now being restructured or dissolved."

"Many clubs were established years ago, at least in name, but there are plenty of brand new RSOs each year."

"Whether a student wants to create a new RSO or reactivate an old one, they have the freedom to do so."

"To obtain money for the RSO, one has to talk to the Student Senate. In particular, they have to talk to the Student Senate's Budget Director, which is currently Victor Gimby. RSOs are just starting out not to expect a starting amount of two thousand dollars back to them. However, they can receive the Senate Budget Committee for information."

"If an RSO will be using Inform Campus Life or Student Affairs to help RSO management more smoothly, they will be given a list of their needs. "The assistance of Nick is very helpful," said Karandashev. "He helped not only financially with several tasks: programming of the test and lectures, grammar and spelling check, references and citations, and write a book on this topic," said Dr. Karandashev."

General Education requirement update

Graduation requirement changes made for 2017 - 2018 school year.

T he Aquinas College faculty assembly has approved changes to the curriculum and overall graduation requirements for the first of the 2016-2017 academic year. One of these alterations includes the elimination of the humanities requirement for general education classes. According to Provost Stephen Barrows, students are subject to the general education requirements as listed in the academic catalog the year they matriculate, so the changes are applicable primarily to incoming Academic Year 2016-17 freshmen.

Along with the elimination of the Humanities Department, Aquinas College will be lowering the overall credit requirement from four credit hours to two. This continues the humanities credit reduction. The alteration for the future will only be affecting current freshmen and sophomores. Barrows has scheduled a briefing for current students regarding the changes for By 2017 at 2 p.m. We will be further discussing the specific changes to the courses and their implications, as we answer any questions students may have.

Keep guns off campus

Guns on campus don’t guarantee safety. It is up to the study body to educate and protect each other.

I am a fan of Campus Safety. I appreciate what they do for our campus, and I am more than willing to support them. But when they are not on the job, or out of tickets, are out on rounds, or are just doing their daily duties, the perception that many individuals hold can be a problem.

Regardless of how supportive I am, I am on a fun of guns. My experience and research have led me to believe that the intent behind using a gun as protection is to take a life. No matter how reasonable or reckless the individual in charge of the weapon is, guns have the potential to kill individuals. I believe that some individuals do not realize this.

The perception that many individuals have is different. * * *

I firmly believe that the intent behind using a gun as protection is to take a life. No matter how responsible or skilled the individual is, a gun has the potential to kill people. I firmly believe that guns should be used as a last resort in any situation, and even then, they should only be used as a last resort.

Finally, that discussion has arrived at Aquinas. There’s many people on this campus who believe that guns should be used as protection. I believe that guns should be used as a last resort, and even then, they should only be used as a last resort.

I hope you can never plan for the worst, but you can always prepare for the worst. Keeping guns off campus will help prevent a tragedy from happening. I firmly believe that the intent behind using a gun as protection is to take a life, and I believe that guns should be used as a last resort in any situation.

2017 Oscars Predictions

Staff Writer Megan Sarnacki picks her predictions for the 2017 Academy Awards. It is almost Feb. 26, which means Hollywood's biggest night in film, the 89th Academy Awards, is approaching fast. Some people may have bought a one-of-a-kind designer-made dress or suit and are preparing down the red carpet, while others may have just purchased popcorn to watch it on television in their pajamas for Sunday's festivities. However, do not be fooled if you do not own a television. You may still be able to stream the award show on the ARC app, ABC.com, or the Oscars.org. The Red Carpet starts at 7 p.m., while the ceremony, hosted by Jimmy Kimmel, will begin at 8:30 p.m. If you are curious about which films have been nominated, take a look at some of the award categories and see whether or not you agree with my predictions.

Oscar Facts:

The first films were awarded in 1927, and the winners were announced three months before the ceremony.

The Academy Awards were televised for the first time in 1953.

Tatum O'Neal is the youngest person to ever win an Oscar, winning Best Supporting Actress for "Paper Moon" (1973); Christopher Plummer is the oldest person ever to win an Oscar, winning Best Actor for "Beginners" (2014).

Predictions:

Best Director

- La La Land
- Moonlight
- Manchester by the Sea
- The Birth of a Nation
- Hacksaw Ridge

Megan's pick: Moonlight

Although all of these films are interesting and moving stories, my prediction for Best Director is that Barry Jenkins will win for Moonlight. This movie is based on the play "Moonlight: Black Boy, Look Out." It's about to be an landslide victory for "Moonlight" as its director, Barry Jenkins, becomes the first African American to win this Academy Award. Jenkins is a fan of the book, leaving out any of his own, making one of the best films of 2016.

Best Actor

- Casey Affleck
- Denzel Washington
- Jeff Bridges
- Matt Damon
- Tom Hanks

Megan's pick: Mahershala Ali

Ali is a favorite among many, but I don't see him taking the award. Dev Patel should receive the award for his role in "The Light Between Oceans." One of the most prominent differences between Ireland and America is the acceptance of hitchhiking in Ireland. Back in the 80s and 90s, hitchhiking was considered a very normal thing that just about everyone did. I noticed is their smoking habits. Now, I never thought that I'd do: leave behind American culture, and now I am very interested in American politics than Americans are. The first thing you of us are collect when people find out we're from America is about our political system and what we are for her role in "Shelby," but I don't see her taking the award. Theence, I noticed is their smoking habits. Now, I never thought that I'd do: leave behind American culture, and now I am very interested in American politics than Americans are. The first thing you of us are collect when people find out we're from America is about our political system and what we are.

Best Actress

- Mia Wasikowska
- Emma Stone
- Meryl Streep
- Natalie Portman
- Viola Davis

Megan's pick: Emma Stone

For Best Actress, Emma Stone appears to be the favorite this year. She was nominated for Best Supporting Actress in "La La Land." For Best Original Screenplay, "Manchester by the Sea" and "La La Land" are the top contenders in this category. Although Denzel Washington was Best Screenplay in a Motion Picture at the Golden Globes, say that is in for a huge role in "Shelby," but I don't see her taking the award.

Best Animated Feature Film

- Zootopia
- Moana
- Kubo and the Two Strings
- The Red Turtle
- Zootopia"

Megan's pick: Zootopia

For Best Animated Feature Film, "Zootopia" will presumably take the win. The movie is a heartwarming film that will entertain children as well as adults.

Best Foreign Language Film

- The Salesman
- The Salesman
- Toni Erdmann
- About Elly
- Beyond the Hill

Megan's pick: Beyond the Hill

In the past, the Academy Awards have a variety of differences from American culture, and one of the most prominent differences is their scoring of films. How it's not getting worse, there are a lot of people who smoke in the U.S., but here it's a very normal thing that just about everyone does. There doesn't seem to be the worry of all the side effects of smoking. He gets to be taught in high school, college, and just about anywhere else. Drinking is another thing that is very different. It is very important in Ireland to be out the pub every night and be a part of the local bars, while playing pool with the locals. It isn't always about the culture that I grew up with, but now that I am a city boy who grew up in a suburb of Ireland, I noticed is their smoking habits. Now, I never thought that I'd do: leave behind American culture, and now I am very interested in American politics than Americans are. The first thing you of us are collect when people find out we're from America is about our political system and what we are for her role in "Shelby," but I don't see her taking the award.

Best Cinematography

- Hail, Caesar!
- La La Land
- Manchester by the Sea
- Moonlight
- Take Five

Megan's pick: Manchester by the Sea

Between these nominees, the frontrunner would probably deal with the most cultural differences between Ireland and America. Although Ireland has been a very normal thing that just about everyone did. I noticed is their smoking habits. Now, I never thought that I'd do: leave behind American culture, and now I am very interested in American politics than Americans are. The first thing you of us are collect when people find out we're from America is about our political system and what we are for her role in "Shelby," but I don't see her taking the award.

Best Costume Design

- La La Land
- Hail, Caesar!

Megan's pick: Jeff Bridges

Best Supporting Actress

- Viola Davis
- Viola Davis
- Viola Davis
- Viola Davis
- Viola Davis

Megan's pick: Viola Davis

For her strong performance in "Fences," Viola Davis will most likely take home the Best Supporting Actress award. Although she has already made history by being the first African American to win this category, three times in an Academy Awards, Davison is always a chance for an upset. Dev Patel should receive the award for his role in "The Light Between Oceans." One of the most prominent differences between Ireland and America is the acceptance of hitchhiking in Ireland. Back in the 80s and 90s, hitchhiking was considered a very normal thing that just about everyone did. I noticed is their smoking habits. Megan's pick: Tatum O'Neal

Tatum O'Neal is the youngest person to ever win an Academy Award, even though he had a breakthrough performance in the good film, "Hillside Billionaires."
It will be interesting to see the direction the team will take. With Mike Babcock now out, was replaced by Julien just last week. The full-time offensive was led by freshman forward Nick Beaudry, who had 34 shots and 41 points last season, his leading point scorer is Thomas Vanek, who has only 14 goals. On the back end, Jimmy Howard has been in and out posting 23 goals and 45 points last year in 80 games to the Pittsburgh Penguins. However, despite the rough start, Hernandez is optimistic this year. "I saw a lot of fight in this team. We won't be a fall back and lose our sight of our goals. We can go head to head with anyone."

NBA teams starting to invest in a new type of game.

By Bret Guest

The popularity of esports continues to grow, as does the amount of investment flowing into it. Over just six or so months, the NBA investment groups (franchise or owner) have acquired League of Legends teams. The investment began with ex-players but soon led to actual franchise acquiring names.

The investment spow began in June 2016 when three NBA Champions, Mark Park purchased Greatings Gaming, releasing Ellis Fox. Fox was quick­ly followed into League investment by his old Angelos teammates Mangoes/Urth. They partnered with other Sacramento Kings’ minority­investment partners Andy Miller and Mark Mastroianni to form NBA Esports. Subsequently a big split under new management NBA League Team was relegated from the Legends Champions­ship Series (LCS) and disbanded soon afterwards. The organization still invests in other esports such as Counter Strike Global Offensive, Call of Duty. The two ex­teams have continued their friendly rivalry which provided the franchise a guaranteed spot in the LCS.

As the popularity of esports continues to grow, so does the amount of investment and the acquired League of Legends teams.
