Aquinas’ annual Spring Formal goes wild at the Bissell Tree House

By Emily White

The Aquinas College Programming Board, led by staff advisor Dr. Gunnoe, presented the second annual Spring Formal on March 22 in the Bissell Tree House. The event was semi-formal and attendees were encouraged to experience the wildness of the venue.

The annual event was semi-formal and open to all students, faculty, and staff. The event was held in the Bissell Tree House on the campus of Aquinas College.

The venue was chosen for its unique setting. The Bissell Tree House is located on the campus of Aquinas College, and its rustic charm provides a perfect backdrop for a semi-formal event.

The event was organized by Programming Board members, who have put a lot of effort into making it a success.

The event was a great success, with hundreds of attendees enjoying the night. The atmosphere was lively and energetic, with music playing and people dancing.

In conclusion, the Spring Formal was a great success, and we look forward to hosting another event in the future.

---

In Case of Emergency wraps up the season...Uncensored

By Cheeky Blackston

The Aquinas In Case of Emergency (ICE) Improv troupe has successfully wrapped up the season with their final show.

The troupe has come a long way since the first season, with many new members joining each year. This year, the troupe has expanded their repertoire and added more games and icebreakers.

The troupe has been a staple of Aquinas College, providing laughs and entertainment for students and faculty alike.

In conclusion, the ICE Improv troupe has had a successful season, and we look forward to their future performances.

---

AQ's new provost

Dr. Gilda Gely accepts provost and executive vice president position

By Maya Money

The search for Aquinas' new provost has come to an end. Aquinas College President Julianne O'Leary announced on March 29, that candidate Dr. Gilda Gely has accepted the provost and Executive Vice President position and will be starting in late May.

Gely has been the provost for Grand Rapids Community College since 2007. Prior to GRC, Gely was the Academic Dean at the University of Vermont at Humanities and Visual Arts Chair for University at Albany. Gely has extensive experience in higher education and has been involved in numerous projects.

Gely expressed a desire to work with the college's leadership team to continue the college's growth and success.

Students who attended the interview process got the opportunity to speak with Gely and learn more about her background and experiences.

The Aquinas In Case of Emergency (ICE) Improv troupe has successfully wrapped up the season with their final show.

The troupe has come a long way since the first season, with many new members joining each year. This year, the troupe has expanded their repertoire and added more games and icebreakers.

The troupe has been a staple of Aquinas College, providing laughs and entertainment for students and faculty alike.

In conclusion, the ICE Improv troupe has had a successful season, and we look forward to their future performances.

---

The Saint

By James Franco

The Aquinas College Programming Board, led by staff advisor Dr. Gunnoe, presented the second annual Spring Formal on March 22 in the Bissell Tree House. The event was semi-formal and attended by students, faculty, and staff.

The venue was chosen for its unique setting. The Bissell Tree House is located on the campus of Aquinas College, and its rustic charm provides a perfect backdrop for a semi-formal event.

The event was organized by Programming Board members, who have put a lot of effort into making it a success.

The event was a great success, with hundreds of attendees enjoying the night. The atmosphere was lively and energetic, with music playing and people dancing.

In conclusion, the Spring Formal was a great success, and we look forward to hosting another event in the future.

---

In Case of Emergency wraps up the season...Uncensored

By Cheeky Blackston

The Aquinas In Case of Emergency (ICE) Improv troupe has successfully wrapped up the season with their final show.

The troupe has come a long way since the first season, with many new members joining each year. This year, the troupe has expanded their repertoire and added more games and icebreakers.

The troupe has been a staple of Aquinas College, providing laughs and entertainment for students and faculty alike.

In conclusion, the ICE Improv troupe has had a successful season, and we look forward to their future performances.

---

The Saint

By James Franco

The Aquinas College Programming Board, led by staff advisor Dr. Gunnoe, presented the second annual Spring Formal on March 22 in the Bissell Tree House. The event was semi-formal and attended by students, faculty, and staff.

The venue was chosen for its unique setting. The Bissell Tree House is located on the campus of Aquinas College, and its rustic charm provides a perfect backdrop for a semi-formal event.

The event was organized by Programming Board members, who have put a lot of effort into making it a success.

The event was a great success, with hundreds of attendees enjoying the night. The atmosphere was lively and energetic, with music playing and people dancing.

In conclusion, the Spring Formal was a great success, and we look forward to hosting another event in the future.

---

In Case of Emergency wraps up the season...Uncensored

By Cheeky Blackston

The Aquinas In Case of Emergency (ICE) Improv troupe has successfully wrapped up the season with their final show.

The troupe has come a long way since the first season, with many new members joining each year. This year, the troupe has expanded their repertoire and added more games and icebreakers.

The troupe has been a staple of Aquinas College, providing laughs and entertainment for students and faculty alike.

In conclusion, the ICE Improv troupe has had a successful season, and we look forward to their future performances.

---

The Saint

By James Franco

The Aquinas College Programming Board, led by staff advisor Dr. Gunnoe, presented the second annual Spring Formal on March 22 in the Bissell Tree House. The event was semi-formal and attended by students, faculty, and staff.

The venue was chosen for its unique setting. The Bissell Tree House is located on the campus of Aquinas College, and its rustic charm provides a perfect backdrop for a semi-formal event.

The event was organized by Programming Board members, who have put a lot of effort into making it a success.

The event was a great success, with hundreds of attendees enjoying the night. The atmosphere was lively and energetic, with music playing and people dancing.

In conclusion, the Spring Formal was a great success, and we look forward to hosting another event in the future.

---

In Case of Emergency wraps up the season...Uncensored

By Cheeky Blackston

The Aquinas In Case of Emergency (ICE) Improv troupe has successfully wrapped up the season with their final show.

The troupe has come a long way since the first season, with many new members joining each year. This year, the troupe has expanded their repertoire and added more games and icebreakers.

The troupe has been a staple of Aquinas College, providing laughs and entertainment for students and faculty alike.

In conclusion, the ICE Improv troupe has had a successful season, and we look forward to their future performances.
AQUINAS: April Fool’s Day prank gone wrong

A recent prank went awry after an April Fool’s Day prank gone wrong at Aquinas.

Aquinas’ April Fool’s Day prank gone wrong

Aquinas’ April Fool’s Day prank gone wrong

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,

A prank gone wrong,
Professor Spotlight:
Dr. Bryil Pilkington

By Alia Griffen
Aquinas College's newest Professor Spotlight is Dr. Bryil Pilkington. Pilkington arrived at Aquinas this fall after spending 10 years in Notre Dame, Indiana. He is married to his wife, Sarah, and they have one child, a girl.

Pilkington has maintained a productive publishing career with works on critical thinking, philosophy, and political philosophy. He is currently working on a book which he describes as, "a philosophy of legal, moral, and political philosophy." Pilkington has also released a book on the topic of critical thinking. He has also recently published a book on critical thinking, "Critical Thinking: What Everyone Should Know," which is now available on Amazon.

In addition to his academic work, Pilkington is also an accomplished filmmaker. He has directed and produced several short films, including "The Game," which was screened at the Aquinas Film Festival in 2014. Pilkington is currently working on a feature film about the life of Saint Francis of Assisi.

Pilkington's research interests include critical thinking, philosophy, and political philosophy. He is currently working on a book which he describes as, "a philosophy of legal, moral, and political philosophy." Pilkington has also recently published a book on the topic of critical thinking. He has also recently published a book on critical thinking, "Critical Thinking: What Everyone Should Know," which is now available on Amazon.

In addition to his academic work, Pilkington is also an accomplished filmmaker. He has directed and produced several short films, including "The Game," which was screened at the Aquinas Film Festival in 2014. Pilkington is currently working on a feature film about the life of Saint Francis of Assisi.

The dating doctor is in

By Tom Can

Aquinas College will host "The Dating Doctor," Dr. Bryan Pilkington, on April 9th. Students will have the opportunity to learn about relationships and advice for both sexes.

The event will be sponsored by the Aquinas College Psychology Club. Dr. Pilkington will speak on the risks of online dating and will share tips on how to make a successful online dating profile.

Dr. Pilkington is the author of "The Dating Doctor: Love, Sex, & Courtship in the 21st Century." He has appeared on numerous radio and television shows and has written for various magazines.

Dr. Pilkington will be available to answer questions from students and will also provide tips on how to make a successful online dating profile.

The event will be held in the Aquinas College Student Center at 7:00 p.m.

Earth Day at Aquinas

The Sustainability Center will be holding "Aquinas College Earth Day: Celebrate the Power of Sustainable Living." The event will feature various activities, including a Earth Day celebration, from 2:00 p.m. until 7:00 p.m.

The event will feature various activities, including a Earth Day celebration, from 2:00 p.m. until 7:00 p.m.

The Sustainability Center will be holding "Aquinas College Earth Day: Celebrate the Power of Sustainable Living." The event will feature various activities, including a Earth Day celebration, from 2:00 p.m. until 7:00 p.m.

The Sustainability Center will be holding "Aquinas College Earth Day: Celebrate the Power of Sustainable Living." The event will feature various activities, including a Earth Day celebration, from 2:00 p.m. until 7:00 p.m.

The Sustainability Center will be holding "Aquinas College Earth Day: Celebrate the Power of Sustainable Living." The event will feature various activities, including a Earth Day celebration, from 2:00 p.m. until 7:00 p.m.

The Sustainability Center will be holding "Aquinas College Earth Day: Celebrate the Power of Sustainable Living." The event will feature various activities, including a Earth Day celebration, from 2:00 p.m. until 7:00 p.m.

The Sustainability Center will be holding "Aquinas College Earth Day: Celebrate the Power of Sustainable Living." The event will feature various activities, including a Earth Day celebration, from 2:00 p.m. until 7:00 p.m.

The Sustainability Center will be holding "Aquinas College Earth Day: Celebrate the Power of Sustainable Living." The event will feature various activities, including a Earth Day celebration, from 2:00 p.m. until 7:00 p.m.

The Sustainability Center will be holding "Aquinas College Earth Day: Celebrate the Power of Sustainable Living." The event will feature various activities, including a Earth Day celebration, from 2:00 p.m. until 7:00 p.m.
Junior Taylor Nefcy, for winning the Amish Mafia, flights a lot less boring; Samuel L. Jackson, for sharing our love of America; Chris Evans, for being our Captain Spoonlickers, for the bringing us Vegan Boys Meets World; Martha Stewart Weddings, for using Blaine for the sole purpose of verification. The Saint reserves the right to edit for using Blaine.

Letters should not exceed 300 words. We will not print anonymous letters to number for the sole purpose of verification. The Saint reserves the right to edit for using Blaine.

The other side Discussing the beautiful argument

By Rebecca Ryan

We reside in the wake of the recent past, in the Michigan stage Right. I thought I could offer something that is completely out of most of all human perspective while you are human in tradition this, and I am human as I write, and so we are all torturously and wonderfully made. Clearly, any social being aware of the dichotomy of opinions surrounding the topic of gay marriage. I want to discuss the stance of this argument, not as one that involves close-mindedness or bigotry or ignorance, but rather, simply, the topic as it is. This is a beautiful argument un-doubtedly arresting. It involves discussion that concerns the nature of the human persons, on creation love and law. There is much discussion of dignity and purpose that we have yet to reach. These ideas offer an unattained reason, as much as we'd like to think otherwise, we are experiencing total breakdown of the argument.

We have arrived at a point where the term "argument" is nothing more, which is in trying to prove that the concept of "arguing" has become easier than this. Instead of speaking to each other, we speak past each other.

The Catholic perspective, often, is in a religion of "no." It's seen as a culture of dichotomies. Of opposites. But in its truth, it isn't ever so. In fact, this should make us a dangerous (in a good way, I mean) argument, that surpasses any true idea of experience. This is because Catholicism, in its nature, is inclusive.

Today, we deviate laws on morality on the simple notion of living as long as it's not hurting anyone. I'll not consider our neighbor in every action, as a non-religious person, I somehow satisfied with only this. It's travels me into the roots of the matter.

Like a young child, it asks questions like "What's the point?" or "What's the purpose?" Where is the point of marriage? Of the family? Of sex? What is the purpose of these things? When honestly considering the answers to these basic questions, any human person will find the requisite responses. The response, in its essence, succeeds to a higher "yes," a "yes" that serves all as we are. It does not sanction gay marriage, it doesn't allow gay marriage, it doesn't legislate to the human person or sensuality, regardless of orientation (see Blessed John Paul II's Theology of the Body for more on this). I say again, this is a beautiful argument. Let each other, last we succumb to a monopolistic way of thought.

In the words of Mother Teresa: "If there is no going to be happiness in our world, that we belong to each other." Thank you for reading, you are the first step.

By Chuck Hyde Staff Writer

Organized religion is somewhat a foreign concept to me. Even when I attend a Catholic Church, I do not feel a sense of community. Even for people who attend a Catholic Church, it is even more pronounced. A lot of people don't notice it among all of the different communities of life, or they don't mind due to their own affiliations with it. Even a non-religious person, I sometimes tune it out. Being a Catholic school, however, I usually can't avoid it. At Aquinas, that's no problem. The Catholic administration is friendly, my fellow students are polite and respectful of my beliefs, and, for the most part, it doesn't affect my life here.

Of course, there are situations when I'm more reminded of it than others: lectures on the literary arts in a Catholic learning environment from a certain professor that make me feel uncomfortable, the ever-present Father Stan and his friendly conversation and accepting personality, and the committee that has to make sure campus events don't interfere with Catholic social teaching are the monologues of Father I, for better or worse. Luckily, the good experiences outweigh the bad. Many of my friends are very religiously but we can respect each other's political and religious viewpoints without affecting our relationship. Learning about religion has also been educational for me. I have attended several masses of different varieties since coming here, and now have an appreciation for them and the religion's impact on the school that I didn't have so much.

I think that overall, the opinion on religion has changed. I have concrete religious background. Religion have been fluctuating and are now at a point where the Pope's words have made a change. I think that the Pope's words have made a change. I am now more comfortable with not being religious each day, and I'm glad that all of the students at Aquinas are too open to all sorts of people.

The Westboro Baptist Church that are not picking signs at funeral- alms and speaking hateful speech against me personally. I don't want to, but the Catholic theology is not true. It's not ever so. In fact, this should make us a dangerous (in a good way, I mean) argument, that surpasses any true idea of experience. This is because Catholicism, in its nature, is inclusive.

Today, we deviate laws on morality on the simple notion of living as long as it's not hurting anyone. I'll not consider our neighbor in every action, as a non-religious person, I somehow satisfied with only this. It's travels me into the roots of the matter. Let each other, last we succumb to a monopolistic way of thought.

In the words of Mother Teresa: "If there is no going to be happiness in our world, that we belong to each other." Thank you for reading, you are the first step.

Interested in writing for theSaint? Email us at saint.editors@aquinas.edu for more information!

What is the point of marriage? Of the family? Of sex? What is the purpose of these things? When honestly considering the answers to these basic questions, any human person will find the requisite responses. The response, in its essence, succeeds to a higher "yes," a "yes" that serves all as we are. It does not sanction gay marriage, it doesn't allow gay marriage, it doesn't legislate to the human person or sensuality, regardless of orientation (see Blessed John Paul II's Theology of the Body for more on this). I say again, this is a beautiful argument. Let each other, last we succumb to a monopolistic way of thought.

In the words of Mother Teresa: "If there is no going to be happiness in our world, that we belong to each other." Thank you for reading, you are the first step.

By Rebecca Ryan

We reside in the wake of the recent past, in the Michigan stage Right. I thought I could offer something that is completely out of most of all human perspective while you are human in tradition this, and I am human as I write, and so we are all torturously and wonderfully made. Clearly, any social being aware of the dichotomy of opinions surrounding the topic of gay marriage. I want to discuss the stance of this argument, not as one that involves close-mindedness or bigotry or ignorance, but rather, simply, the topic as it is. This is a beautiful argument un-doubtedly arresting. It involves discussion that concerns the nature of the human persons, on creation love and law. There is much discussion of dignity and purpose that we have yet to reach. These ideas offer an unattained reason, as much as we'd like to think otherwise, we are experiencing total breakdown of the argument.

We have arrived at a point where the term "argument" is nothing more, which is in trying to prove that the concept of "arguing" has become easier than this. Instead of speaking to each other, we speak past each other.

The Catholic perspective, often, is in a religion of "no." It's seen as a culture of dichotomies. Of opposites. But in its truth, it isn't ever so. In fact, this should make us a dangerous (in a good way, I mean) argument, that surpasses any true idea of experience. This is because Catholicism, in its nature, is inclusive.

Today, we deviate laws on morality on the simple notion of living as long as it's not hurting anyone. I'll not consider our neighbor in every action, as a non-religious person, I somehow satisfied with only this. It's travels me into the roots of the matter. Let each other, last we succumb to a monopolistic way of thought.

In the words of Mother Teresa: "If there is no going to be happiness in our world, that we belong to each other." Thank you for reading, you are the first step.

By Chuck Hyde Staff Writer

Organized religion is somewhat a foreign concept to me. Even when I attend a Catholic Church, I do not feel a sense of community. Even for people who attend a Catholic Church, it is even more pronounced. A lot of people don't notice it among all of the different communities of life, or they don't mind due to their own affiliations with it. Even a non-religious person, I sometimes tune it out. Being a Catholic school, however, I usually can't avoid it. At Aquinas, that's no problem. The Catholic administration is friendly, my fellow students are polite and respectful of my beliefs, and, for the most part, it doesn't affect my life here.

Of course, there are situations when I'm more reminded of it than others: lectures on the literary arts in a Catholic learning environment from a certain professor that make me feel uncomfortable, the ever-present Father Stan and his friendly conversation and accepting personality, and the committee that has to make sure campus events don't interfere with Catholic social teaching are the monologues of Father I, for better or worse. Luckily, the good experiences outweigh the bad. Many of my friends are very religiously but we can respect each other's political and religious viewpoints without affecting our relationship. Learning about religion has also been educational for me. I have attended several masses of different varieties since coming here, and now have an appreciation for them and the religion's impact on the school that I didn't have so much.

I think that overall, the opinion on religion has changed. I have concrete religious background. Religion have been fluctuating and are now at a point where the Pope's words have made a change. I think that the Pope's words have made a change. I am now more comfortable with not being religious each day, and I'm glad that all of the students at Aquinas are too open to all sorts of people.
Movies: Dreamboat Efron to star in Gossip Girl's legal thriller The Associate Hollywood's sexiest dreamboat is set to take on the world’s largest law firm for suspense purposes. No defense team had been challenged.

Television: Funny man Letterman announces retirement from Late Show
After 30 years of entertaining television audiences, comedian David Letterman, 66, has finally announced his retirement from hosting CBS’s The Late Show. Letterman, who revealed his retirement plans to audiences while taping his show on April 3, and his final show is expected to air in 2015.

Music: Hilary Duff returns to music scene after seven year hiatus
On March 28, via Warner, former Lizzie McGuire star and pop singer Hilary Duff made a statement that fans have been waiting for: a new album, Disney. The 20-year-old singer’s long awaited comeback was released on the world’s largest law firm for suspense purposes. No defense team had been challenged.

The Boys” cater to that very need, whether you are planning through the dust’s most recent release. If you are not sensitive to any of these terms, try “Mango Tree” and “Golden Leaves” instead. These are two of the most popular songs that will certainly get you into the groove. For more fun, you can also try “Mango Tree” instead. The result is well worth your while.

Artistic Profile: Good Eats: A kitchen-manual for culinary connoisseurs
By Mark Bittman & Michael Silverstein
Good Eats is a series on Food Network that started in 2003. The premise of the show is to explore the world of food and cooking, with a focus on sustainability and healthy eating.

On Good Eats, the hosts, Alton Brown and Simon Majumdar, explore various culinary topics, from the science behind different cooking techniques to the history of particular dishes. The show is known for its focus on practical, easy-to-follow recipes, and for providing insights into the world of food production.

In this article, we’ll take a closer look at Good Eats and explore some of the unique aspects of the show that have made it a favorite among food enthusiasts. From its focus on sustainable cooking practices to its emphasis on the science behind cooking techniques, Good Eats is a must-watch for anyone interested in the world of food.

Terra, the hipster hot spot in New Orleans, is the place to go for those who want to try something new and different. The menu is filled with Michigan-based meals and as Terra seats by a friendly server. The menu is filled with Michigan-based meals and as Terra seats by a friendly server.

In the Spotlight: Angust and Julia Stone

The most bluesy: The Australian brother-sister act have all it takes to be in the next folk sensations.

The Boys” cater to that very need, whether you are planning through the dust’s most recent release. If you are not sensitive to any of these terms, try “Mango Tree” and “Golden Leaves” instead. These are two of the most popular songs that will certainly get you into the groove. For more fun, you can also try “Mango Tree” instead. The result is well worth your while.

Artistic Profile: Good Eats: A kitchen-manual for culinary connoisseurs
By Mark Bittman & Michael Silverstein
Good Eats is a series on Food Network that started in 2003. The premise of the show is to explore the world of food and cooking, with a focus on sustainability and healthy eating.

On Good Eats, the hosts, Alton Brown and Simon Majumdar, explore various culinary topics, from the science behind different cooking techniques to the history of particular dishes. The show is known for its focus on practical, easy-to-follow recipes, and for providing insights into the world of food.

In this article, we’ll take a closer look at Good Eats and explore some of the unique aspects of the show that have made it a favorite among food enthusiasts. From its focus on sustainable cooking practices to its emphasis on the science behind cooking techniques, Good Eats is a must-watch for anyone interested in the world of food.

Terra, the hipster hot spot in New Orleans, is the place to go for those who want to try something new and different. The menu is filled with Michigan-based meals and as Terra seats by a friendly server. The menu is filled with Michigan-based meals and as Terra seats by a friendly server.

In the Spotlight: Angust and Julia Stone

The most bluesy: The Australian brother-sister act have all it takes to be in the next folk sensations.

The Boys” cater to that very need, whether you are planning through the dust’s most recent release. If you are not sensitive to any of these terms, try “Mango Tree” and “Golden Leaves” instead. These are two of the most popular songs that will certainly get you into the groove. For more fun, you can also try “Mango Tree” instead. The result is well worth your while.

Artistic Profile: Good Eats: A kitchen-manual for culinary connoisseurs
By Mark Bittman & Michael Silverstein
Good Eats is a series on Food Network that started in 2003. The premise of the show is to explore the world of food and cooking, with a focus on sustainability and healthy eating.

On Good Eats, the hosts, Alton Brown and Simon Majumdar, explore various culinary topics, from the science behind different cooking techniques to the history of particular dishes. The show is known for its focus on practical, easy-to-follow recipes, and for providing insights into the world of food.

In this article, we’ll take a closer look at Good Eats and explore some of the unique aspects of the show that have made it a favorite among food enthusiasts. From its focus on sustainable cooking practices to its emphasis on the science behind cooking techniques, Good Eats is a must-watch for anyone interested in the world of food.

Terra, the hipster hot spot in New Orleans, is the place to go for those who want to try something new and different. The menu is filled with Michigan-based meals and as Terra seats by a friendly server. The menu is filled with Michigan-based meals and as Terra seats by a friendly server.

In the Spotlight: Angust and Julia Stone

The most bluesy: The Australian brother-sister act have all it takes to be in the next folk sensations.
El Ultimo Elvis

A story of love, music, and obsession

By Cameran Thompson
The Saint Reporter

The Fifth Annual Latin American Film Festival held at the Gutierrez (Carlos' daughter).

Olemberg (Carlos' ex-wife) and American Film Festival held at the Gutierrez (Carlos' daughter).

Responsive state at the hospital. His wife, Griselda, is in a non-accident. He is called upon to care paternal responsibility when his "King," then is suddenly left with his own home. The next and final performance will be for the benefit of Griselda's care, Carlos returns to Griselda's care, Carlos ardent and childlike adventure is actually stepped in darkness and it can be said that something is going to happen to his wife, Griselda, who fears that she and Carlos are leaving home to his own home. The next and final scene is a sad depiction of the scenes in the last years of his life. Suddenly, the character is an Eastown novelty.

Wonders are the number of a variety in passion competitions and during continuous activities. "Ego" represents consists of more than a dozen songs, all of which span through different generation. The fest includes a Mozart concert as well as an exhibition of Broadway, jazz, country, and pop. The Saint is an Eastown novelty.

The nose knows: Aquinas College's production of the historic comedy promises to be filled with sword fights and Romantic poetry. "de Bergerac"

The Saint College junior Angelina Repes has been wait­ ing for her first vocal recital in Klaviertum Recital Hall at the "Art's and Music Center on Saturday. She is the prime opportunity for her to show off all her hard work and talent.
The doors are expected to open at 7 pm, and her performance will start at 8 pm. Following performances in which all are invited to attend.

The plot follows the dete­ rmination of an Elvis impersonator who becomes trapped in the life of the "King," then is suddenly left with paternal responsibility when his own home. The next and final performance will be for the benefit of Griselda's care, Carlos returns to Griselda's care, Carlos

John Guild and Stephen Wright play Captain LeBret and Count De Collenburg respectively as the narrators of the play and the poetry of the man on latest album. "Supermodel"

What you want to be: Indie-pop band Foster the People asks some tough ques­ tions on their latest record, pushing the envelope with controversal lyrics. Foster the People's second studio album makes a shift from elec­ tronic beats into a sound that combines elements of pop and rock.

On March 19, Colombus Records re­ leased Foster the People's latest album, Supermodel, which garnered generally favor­ able responses.

John Guild and Stephen Wright play Captain LeBret and Count De Collenburg respectively as the narrator of the play and the poetry of the man on latest album. "Supermodel"

The pattern of sounds add a diver­ sity theme by incorporating West Afri­ can rhythms and effects in a number of her pieces in various more than a dozen songs, all of which span through different generation. The fest includes a Mozart concert as well as an exhibition of Broadway, jazz, country, and pop. The Saint is an Eastown novelty.

Voynera Judi, and Carim Sanius, stars in the historic comedy, de Bergerac. Ten twenty four lovers, together they fall in love with each other. Freshman Ben Avery

The comedy unfolds in France, as all kinds of people together in the context of a historical relationship. "Eastown novelty, as the Clarkston, MI native reports, is the prime opportunity for her to show off all her hard work and talent.
The doors are expected to open at 7 pm, and her performance will start at 8 pm. Following performances in which all are invited to attend.

The plot follows the determina­ tion of an Elvis impersonator who becomes trapped in the life of the "King," then is suddenly left with paternal responsibility when his own home. The next and final performance will be for the benefit of Griselda's care, Carlos returns to Griselda's care, Carlos

John Guild and Stephen Wright play Captain LeBret and Count De Collenburg respectively as the narrator of the play and the poetry of the man on latest album. "Supermodel"

What you want to be: Indie-pop band Foster the People asks some tough ques­ tions on their latest record, pushing the envelope with controversal lyrics. Foster the People's second studio album makes a shift from elec­ tronic beats into a sound that combines elements of pop and rock.

On March 19, Colombus Records re­ leased Foster the People's latest album, Supermodel, which garnered generally favor­ able responses.

John Guild and Stephen Wright play Captain LeBret and Count De Collenburg respectively as the narrator of the play and the poetry of the man on latest album. "Supermodel"

What you want to be: Indie-pop band Foster the People asks some tough ques­ tions on their latest record, pushing the envelope with controversal lyrics. Foster the People's second studio album makes a shift from elec­ tronic beats into a sound that combines elements of pop and rock.

On March 19, Colombus Records re­ leased Foster the People's latest album, Supermodel, which garnered generally favor­ able responses.

What you want to be: Indie-pop band Foster the People asks some tough ques­ tions on their latest record, pushing the envelope with controversal lyrics. Foster the People's second studio album makes a shift from elec­ tronic beats into a sound that combines elements of pop and rock.

On March 19, Colombus Records re­ leased Foster the People's latest album, Supermodel, which garnered generally favor­ able responses.

What you want to be: Indie-pop band Foster the People asks some tough ques­ tions on their latest record, pushing the envelope with controversal lyrics. Foster the People's second studio album makes a shift from elec­ tronic beats into a sound that combines elements of pop and rock.

On March 19, Colombus Records re­ leased Foster the People's latest album, Supermodel, which garnered generally favor­ able responses.

What you want to be: Indie-pop band Foster the People asks some tough ques­ tions on their latest record, pushing the envelope with controversal lyrics. Foster the People's second studio album makes a shift from elec­ tronic beats into a sound that combines elements of pop and rock.

On March 19, Colombus Records re­ leased Foster the People's latest album, Supermodel, which garnered generally favor­ able responses.

What you want to be: Indie-pop band Foster the People asks some tough ques­ tions on their latest record, pushing the envelope with controversal lyrics. Foster the People's second studio album makes a shift from elec­ tronic beats into a sound that combines elements of pop and rock.

On March 19, Colombus Records re­ leased Foster the People's latest album, Supermodel, which garnered generally favor­ able responses.

What you want to be: Indie-pop band Foster the People asks some tough ques­ tions on their latest record, pushing the envelope with controversal lyrics. Foster the People's second studio album makes a shift from elec­ tronic beats into a sound that combines elements of pop and rock.

On March 19, Colombus Records re­ leased Foster the People's latest album, Supermodel, which garnered generally favor­ able responses.
Taylor Pawlanta
Senior shows passion on field

By Alyssa Frese

Taylor Pawlanta has made sure he has a coach for all the seasons. He was on the baseball field in high school but has been involved in other sports. Now that you know a little about his writing style and my presentations, you may have come across a couple of sports articles. You mentioned that you have never stopped loving baseball and got me to love it as well. Teenage baseball has fueled his in- the sport of baseball has fueled his in-
Men and women’s lacrosse

By Taylor Hodges
Staff Writer

The women’s lacrosse team is doing quite well as playoffs are just around the corner. Having won their last five games in a row, the team chemistry seems to be right where it should. “Winning is fun and when you win against tough opponents you bond in a team,” said incoming defender Kendal Carr. “Sharing a common goal and achieving it forms a strong friendship between the people you share it with.”

After a huge win against rival Northwood by a score of 16-6, the energy in the locker room is oozing with joy and confidence. “The environment in the locker room is crazy,” said Carr. “Everyone is pumped for playoffs but we’re going to get the job done (winning nationals).”

The Saints are now 8-3 overall and 8-2 in the WHAC. Freshman Hannah Crosby leads the team in goals and points with 39 and 54 respectively. Junior Alexa Burns has registered 50 points and leads the team in ground balls with 36.

Red Wings Things are looking up

By Taylor Hodges
Staff Writer

The Detroit Red Wings are sitting pretty well after winning three of their most recent games. On Saturday, April 5, the Red Wings played the Montreal Canadiens and lost 5-2 which brought the Wings overall record to 37-17-3, if of those games being played at overtime.

The Wings are seated in first place for the wild card which means, as of this moment, they would make the playoffs. Seated behind them by only one point is rival Columbus. The Blue Jackets have 37 points while the Wings have 39 points.

If the playoffs started today, the Red Wings would be slated to begin their post season play against the Pittsburgh Penguins.

The Wings are currently on a three game winning streak which has been quite strong. Yet another reason to believe Detroit will do superb with an increased level of competition.

After this weekend, the Wings will only have four games remaining until it’s time for the playoffs. The Wings need to stay focused and play hard because anything is possible.